

Earn Your Master of Arts in EDUCATION in Educational Leadership

The Centenary University Master of Arts (M.A.) in Education: Educational Leadership program is approved by the New Jersey Department of Education to grant Principal and Supervisor Licensure in this 39-credit graduate program.

The program includes coursework in the areas of school law, curriculum development, and supervision. We put a strong emphasis on developing leaders who understand and accept the differences in their students, colleagues, and families, with regard to ability, socio-economic status, and cultural diversity.

Our 39-credit program provides you with:

- Knowledge and skills in the areas of school leadership and administration.
- A strong background in the design, implementation, practice, and assessment of instructional programs.

Become a leader in the field of educational leadership.

Learn to:

- Develop a thorough understanding of the theory and practice of educational leadership.
- Learn the skills necessary to excel as an educational leader and to support effective teaching and learning.
- Acquire the necessary skills to critically analyze a learning organization's performance.
- Develop an appreciation of the legal, cultural, and ethical issues that influence our nation's educational institutions.
